An Act to provide for an award for exceptional cadets

Preamble

Although First Nations persons were exempt from conscription, more than 4000 such persons enlisted in World War I and 3000 enlisted in World War II. Many lost their Indian status because they were away for more than four years. Despite this, many continued their community service and gave back to their communities their entire life. Murray Whetung is a Curve Lake First Nations veteran who has continued to serve his community after returning from service overseas.
